

Dr. Andrew Green has been a guest panelist/speaker on several occasions at Rice University, discussing STEM in Sports. He is a product of the culture of excellence that permeates Texas A&M University. He holds a Doctorate of Chiropractic Medicine and Postgraduate Studies in Acupuncture and Medical Neurodiagnostics. As an undergraduate, he was chosen to conduct chemical research at Princeton University and conducted combinatorial peptide chemistry research in the Dept. of Entomology at Texas A&M University. As an professional chemist he served roles as water treatment chemist, plant chemist, plant manager, polymer resin chemist and cosmetic formulations chemist. As a healthcare professional, Dr. Green has diagnosed and treated several NFL, NBA and NCAA athletes.